EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The City of Sugar Land has a history of making public investments in cultural arts – including the Houston Museum of Natural Science at Sugar Land, Sugar Land Auditorium, events in Town Square, the Sugar Land Heritage Foundation and the Sugar Land Wine and Food Affair. Planning also is ongoing to develop an indoor performing arts center. Further, it is anticipated that there will be continued requests for public support of community cultural arts initiatives – whether that is programming support for existing organizations or capital funding for new facilities, such as the community theater also identified as a goal by the Visioning Task Force.

Before future investments were made, however, the City recognized the need to develop a Cultural Arts Strategic Plan to lay out a formal decision making process to assist in the prioritization of funding requests. Therefore, a contract with Lord Cultural Resources was approved in May 2012 to complete the Cultural Arts Strategic Plan and Implementation Guide. The intent of this process was to help ensure the community's vision for cultural arts continues to be successful and public dollars are invested appropriately, as well as to recommend ways to utilize the Sugar Land Legacy Foundation to further support funding facilities and activities benefiting the community – including in the arts.

Based upon an extensive public engagement process, the draft plan and implementation guide were prepared and presented to the City Council in an April 2013 workshop. At this workshop, the City Council directed staff to refine a concept in the draft plan that called for the creation of a single umbrella entity and explore the option of utilizing an existing City Board or Commission in possible partnership with an existing community organization. After additional research, the final draft of the Strategic Plan and Implementation guide was reviewed with the City Council in February 2014 workshop and approved by resolution at the March 18, 2014 City Council meeting. The final Plan identifies the following five priorities:

- § Designate an Individual or Organization to Lead Development of the Cultural Sector,
- § Create Conditions in which the Cultural Arts Thrive,
- § Strengthen Capacity of Cultural Arts Community,
- § Celebrate and Distinguish Sugar Land through the Cultural Arts, and
- § Strengthen and Increase Cultural Participation.

An Implementation Guide, which recommends the relative timing and prioritization of all of the recommend elements of a successful community-wide cultural arts program, is included in the Plan. It recommends that the City first focus on establishing responsibility within an existing Board or Commission, developing a public art plan, evaluating future funding sources for the arts and establishing a granting program. Further, it also recommends early consideration of a contract with a community organization to focus on the promotion of the cultural sector and the provision of capacity building training for the many existing organizations and artists within Sugar Land.

The revisions to the Ordinance strengthen the appointment criteria to ensure representation of various skills and qualifications beneficial to Parks & Recreation, Cultural Arts and Leadership, representing various community sectors including Parks & Recreation, Arts & Culture, Education, Business and Philanthropy. The revisions to the Ordinance optimize the size of the new “PARCS Board” to nine members which will facilitate greater engagement and effectiveness. It is proposed that the majority of the appointees provide broad representation of all Parks & Recreation Users and the balance of the appointees bring skills, qualifications and experience relative to the new Arts & Culture responsibilities of the board.

Accordingly, staff recommends approval of Ordinance No. 1963 amending the ordinance regarding the name and duties of the Parks and Recreation Policy Advisory Board.
